This is the first action which the Italians have fought in Albania, and the first recorded occasion when the Allies have enjoyed the support of Essad Pasha's followers. The motley forces of the Allies retired, and it is not yet clear whether it is intended to hold Durazzo until the Serbians have been evacuated by soa, or whether they will retire by land on Avions. The Journal states that, while 80,000 Serbian troops have already been installed at Corfu. 28,000 still remain in Albania, who also, together with Essad Pasha's forces, are to be removed to the island. Sir Roper Parkington, Consul-General for Montenegro in London, has received from M. Misouchekevics, President of the Council and Minister of Foreign Affairs of Montenegro, and interesting pronouncement on the late events in Montenegro. Incidentally, it is a defence of the Government and a justification of its action during the trying days following the occupation of Lovchen and Cotinje.

M. Misouchekevics declares that when Montenego entered the war on the side of the Allies she was promised everything necessary for the army and also for the civil population, because, in ordinary times even, they imported wheat. Russia and France were to furnish supplies, but unfortunately this promise could not be carried out. They did what they could, but it was much less than Montenegro needed, alike in arms, artillery, and munitions, and, above all, in food. In view of the blockade by the Austrian fleet it was necessary to transport wheat in ox-carts and on horseback from Ipek to the Sanjak. Each double journey took two months, and after 18 monthed was all the oxen and horses and means of transport were exhausted. In spite of that the Montenegrins entered Austrian territory and remained there until the Serbian retreat. They therefore claimed to have fulfilled their role of ally as well as they could with an army of nearly 50,000 men badly fed and badly equipped.

Germany and her Navy.

The German Prees, a message from Amsterdam informs us, is wildly delighted over the latest "victory" in the North Sea. Trivial and ridiculous as the incident is, nevertheless it is interesting as a symptom of the German people's need for reassurance on the naval situation. A few days ago the Berliner Tageblatt, always the most outspoken of the German newspapers, published a remarkable article, in the course of which it said that, unless Germany's sea-power has been absurdly over-rated, "Germany's sea-dogs cannot be searched to be permanent, and to guard the left flank of the Allies in case the enemy should cross the Greek frontier in this Germany's sea-power has been absurdly over-rated, "Germany's sea-dogs cannot content themselves much longer with merely showing their teeth." It admitted that the British Navy is not a power to be scoffed at, but, "all the same, for our Fleet to remain much longer hidden are in the same, the same is situated on the main road from Salonika to Monastir.

mitted that the British Navy is not a power to be scoffed at sut. "all the sams for our Fleet to remain much longer hidden away in the canal will soon make it look ridiculous. It is better to deep and die than skulk in safety." The fact that the publication of an article of this character was permitted bears witness to the unrest of German public opinion. This unrest will doubtless be appeased, temporarily and to a certain extent, by what the Kochnache Folkzeriung lyrically describes as the "adroit manouvring and daring enterprise" of the destroyer flottilla which "advanced" to the Dogger Bank on Thursday night. War-tinfe gossip is generally foolish and frequently mischievous, declares Mr. Geo. R. Sims, in his delectable "Mustard and Cress" columns in The Referce. It has been current gossip after every Zeppelin raid that our airment have been willing to go up and attack, but have been forbidden to do so. One can lardly believe that; but it is still more difficult to believe that our "swarm of hornets" has shrunk from the task. That is a wicked invention of the Germans, who are still here, assisting the movements of enemy aliens, putting time bombs on our ships, and setting fire to important factories; managing hotels and sanatoria for convolescent officers, and arranging transit of foed and other supplies to German are all right: it is the lack of system in the control of the air service that is responsible for its failpre as a defensive force against the invader. M. Briand, replying to Signor Salandra's toast, said—Monateur le Premier, having reached the end of our too short, stay, which has enabled my colleagues and myself to form personal ties with Your Excellency and the members of the Hoyal Government which we had for a long time been anxious to establish. I desire to express to you all the satisfaction which we feel at these first meetings, coming from all parts of the provinces, as well as from the highest authorities, and from people of whom your city is so justly proud. The sympathy which has found such warm expression in your cordial welcome has made our task very much easier, and has been a bond of union between all has been a drennies the coordination.

LOSS ON POSTAL ORDERS AS

CURRENCY. the Allies.

The visit of M. Briand has proved in every case that no divergency of view exists between the two Governments, which are animated by the same sentiments, and are in the same degree determined to continue the war to victory, to complete the crushing of the Austro-German Coalition.

In connection with the issue of currency postal orders early in the war, the Post Office deviation and a no poundage was charged lower to victory, to complete the crushing of the Austro-German Coalition. nue the loss of revenue resulted. This statement made in the volume of appropriation account statement issued on Saturday. The value of inland tegrams on Government services increased List,000, and the value of trunk telephonicalls by £31,000.
